Definitions:

“Reside together” means that the two of you share a place to live. You don’t both have to be on the rental agreement or deed. It is okay if one or both of you has a separate place somewhere else. Even if one of you leaves the place you share, you still live together as long as the one who left intends to return.

“Basic living expenses” includes costs for food, shelter, and medical expenses. You don’t have to split basic expenses to be domestic partners. You just have to agree to provide these things for your partner if he or she can’t provide for him or herself.
