Ross Valley - Supervisor Katie Rice and the Department of Public Works' (DPW) Flood Control staff invite the public to a Community Meeting on Saturday, May 5th, 2012 from 10:00am to 12:00 noon to learn about Ross Valley's important flood reduction and watershed protection program and how it’s developing. The meeting will be held at the Drake High School Student Union.

A 10-Year Work Plan was recently adopted at the April 3, 2012 meeting of the Flood Zone 9 Advisory Board. The proposed set of projects in the 10 year work plan will significantly raise the level of flood protection in the valley. The plan is drawn from the Capital Improvement Plan Study Report which was presented to the community in May 2011. Find the report on our website: http://marinwatersheds.org/pubs_reports_ross_valley.html.

Supervisor Katie Rice, who has worked on this program since its inception and now leads the effort, said, “The Ross Valley Watershed Program will increase the level of flood protection and at the same time add value to our community through environmental and infrastructure improvements. The program is moving forward and major projects are beginning to take shape. The Community Meeting will allow us to give a good overview of what’s being planned for the immediate future and what that means for residents of the Ross Valley. We look forward to seeing you there.”

County Flood Control staff will present an overview of the 10 Year Work Plan, explain how it significantly increases the level of flood protection and what projects will be first. There will be map exhibits highlighting the locations of the projects in the 10 Year Work Plan. Staff and Consulting Engineers will be available to answer your questions after the presentation.
