

Accomplishing and Overcoming

"I don't think human beings learn anything without desperation. Desperation is a necessary ingredient to learning anything or creating anything. Period. If you ain't desperate at some point, you ain't interesting." - Jim Carrey

I think the quote of the week is a very powerful quote. To me it means that no matter what you accomplish in life, you always had to overcome something. No matter what it is that you wish for or are grinding for, you're going to go through hell to be able to earn it. That's what makes your accomplishments so important and meaningful. If you never had to go through the mud and really get your grind on for what you wanted, you wouldn't appreciate your accomplishment as much.

On top of that, if you just gave up on your goals because it was too hard for you, then you didn't accomplish anything. So, the real accomplishment would be what you overcame because if you never overcame then, you wouldn't be in the position you are in now.

-Writer

From The Beat: We feel the strength and conviction in your words. You truly value the strength in the struggle. We respect and value your take on this quote. You are spot on in the way you articulate the difference of appreciation when some things come easily versus when it comes with obstacles.